It is thought that, inasmuch as theatrical people are the chief factors in earning this money, it is only fair and just that they be given a chare of it.

They argue that large revenue has been derived from ship concerts, the receipts of which run from $90 to $1,500, and that American and English actors have been chiefly instrumental in carning this money. NEW COLLECTIONS GIVEN TO NATIONAL MUSEUM.

Firearms of All Nations and Periods to Be, Shown at Washington.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL. Washington, Aug. 20.—The National Mu-seum has just received two magnificent col-lections; the finest, in fact, that have reached that institution for several years. They are at present undergoing classificaion preparatory to being placed upon exhibition. The most important of the two is ne just received from the War Department. Along about the year 1859 the War Deent, which, from the very date of its organization and establishment under Presdent Washington, had devoted considerable time and attention to collecting firearms of various types, models, countries and periods, and especially those made in this country, established a military museum in the Winder building, in which it placed on exhibition what, even at that period, was a very large collection of guns. During the Civil War, however, the War Department was so crowded for room that it was obliged to suspend the military museum and once more store the collection in the department cellars.

store the collection in the department cellars.

The collection has remained there ever since, together with numerous accessions amounting to as much if not more, than the entire collection as it existed at the beginning of the Civil War.

Recently, however, the War Department, in view of the fact that it was in no wise able to exhibit these firearms as they should be shown, turned the entire collection over to the National Museum, placing it in the hands of Mr. George C. Maynard, Curator of Mechanical Science of that institution, who is now busy preparing the specimens for exhibition.

It is the intention of the National Museum to increase the collection by gathering together one of the largest and most extensive exhibits of firearms in North America. As the collection now stands, it contains apecimens of each and all of the firearms invented, made and used for and in the different American wars, as well as a large body of foreign arms. body of foreign arms.

Chief Dispensary Physician Scherck Advocates Permanent Staff to Answer Calls.

NEW SYSTEM SAVES LIVES.

Record of Last Month Shows Many Cases Where Patients Are Revived by Doctors Accompanying Wagons.

Doctor H. J. Scherck, Chief Dispensary Physician, who is advocating that staff physicians accompany all ambulances in answering calls, has compiled a table of all major part of the last morth that the exent has been in operation.

The storm on August 5, which did so much damage, particularly at the World's Fair was the immediate cause of the order given by Doctor Scherck, although he had been contemplating it for some time previous to that date. The service rendered by the staff physicians on the afternoon of the fifth resulted in Doctor Scherck's de rision to make the experiment.

Between August 8 and 39 ninety calls have been answered by ambulances accompanied by a staff physician. In many of these cases prompt attention given to the patient not only resulted in immediate 1elief, but Doctor Scherck cites several case: where he says that life was saved. These last instances are especially true in the cases of quick-acting potsons, when a ride in an ambulance of from twenty minutes to a half hour back to the dispensary without medical attention would have resulted in the patient's death.

The same holds true of accidents which esult in fractures, scalp wounds and the like. If these cases can be treated in a emporary way even on the spot where th accident took place, more serious results can be averted, Doctor Scherck says.

can be averted, Doctor Scherck says.

In the record which Doctor Scherck has made there were many cases of heat prostration and heat exhaustion. For these relief was administered as soon as the physician arrived, which gave early stimulation and not only removed the necessity for extremely rigorous action upon the arrival of the ambulance at the dispensary, but placed the patient in a fair way for recovery. HEMORRHAGE STOPPED.

There are also many cases of wounds instance the hemorrhage was first arrested by the immediate attention of the staff physician and upon arrival at the dispensary was completely controlled.

One notable result of the experiment dur-ing the time it has been in vogue is that the customary notation, "died on the way to the

At present the physicians of the vaccine department of the dispensary have been pressed into this emergency service, which has crippled that department to a certain extent, as there are only seven physicians who are performing this double duty.

NEEDS MORE PHYSICIANS.

of ten physicians for emergency work the ambulances would be well equipped. This would enable him to place the vaccine doctors back in their proper department. Another improvement which Doctor Scherck is anxious to make is the equipment of the ambulances themselves with the necessary medicines, splints and bandages which may be used for emergency work.

the necessary medicines, splints and bandages which may be used for emergency work.

This would result, Doctor Scherck says, in a great saving to the city, for there are a great number of persons who have a horror of a hospital and an operating-room.

The saving would come about in this way: The record of the list month shows that there have been several cases where the patient has received the temporary relief by the staff physician and been taken directly to his home.

Under the old method of going at once to the dispensary and there receiving the temporary relief which under the present system he would get at once, there were many cases in which the patient was not able to tell where his home was on arrival at the dispensary, and there was nothing to do but convey him to the City Hospital, when treatment at once would have precluded the usual routine and resulted in relieving the city of caring for him.

It often happens that a patient will have relatives or friends who are well able and would rather have the care of their own sick, but on account of not receiving immediate attention the case has progressed at the City Hospital that he cannot be moved, sometimes for as long a period as several weeks.

It is this class of cases which Doctor Scherck is particularly anxious to relieve the city of, and he says that the solution of the problem is a permanent staff of physicians for the emergency work, both day and night.

PASTORS AID BUTCHERS IN SUNDAY CLOSING PLAN.

Movement Looking to the Cessa-

Communications from the St. Louis Retail Butchers' Association asking the support of the public in the closing of their shops on Sundays after September I were read from the pulpits of many local churches yesterday.

The Reverend Doctor Samuel C. Paimer pastor of the Lafavette Park Presbyterian Church, devoted a part of his sermon to impressing upon his congregation the importance of the butchers' movement and to the asking of a unanimous support. Letters were sent by the association to all pastors, pointing out the fact that the ashas agreed that none of its mem bers may keep open shops on Sundays, saying that the organization views with alarm the desecration of the Sabbath. The communication also stated that

ROOT ADVISES CARE IN FINANCIAL LEGISLATION.

Little of Value Accomplished; He Says by the Few Who Frame a Bill.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL. Washington, Aug. 20.-Secretary Root never had much legislative experience; in his services in the New York Constitutional Convention in 1894 is all the business of a legislative character that he ever transacted. He was then chairman of the Committee on Judiciary, the most important committee in the body.

"My experience in that con "ntion," said the Secretary, "has shown me that legislative government is better than arbitrary government. I have had plenty of experience in arbitrary government, both in Cuba and the Philippines.

"The method of legislative governmen is slower, but in the end it is better. In the New York Constitutional Convention there were men of various capacity, ranging from the most brilliant to the sluggish and stupid. I found that this latte class was very useful. They had a different point of view. In explaining and discussing with them what seemed a perfeetly plain proposition, I often found that fectly plain proposition, I often found that their point of view was right.

"What seemed at first stupid opposition sometimes proved to be the right course and that these men were looking at the question from a standpoint closer to the needs and desires of the great mass of people than those of more brilliant intellect and learning.

"I am convinced that in any legislative assembly even the most perverse and stupid member is of some use. In making a law plain to his understanding the framers are very likely to make it more easily understood by all people and render it easily construed and interpreted.

"In amending a bill to meet the knowledge of those whose understanding is not the best, defects are often found which may be remedied with wholesome affect."

These remarks were made in discussing session of Congress. Mr. Root has not given attention to finance, but there is no doubt, if he were in an executive or legislative position which required his action on such matters, he would become master of the subject, as he did of the problems of insular government and military affairs.

"Financial legislation is not accomplished." said Mr. Root, "simply by calling Congress together and presenting a bill prepared by a few men. Some people think that all that is necessary is for such a bill to be piesented and for the Speaker to say. "All in favor of this bill say aye," and it is through.

"There will have to be a pretty general agreement of all the leading men in Congress, and then it must be discussed and carefully considered and made plain to those who are not experts. All this means delay, but delays are not always dangerous.

"Of course, an arbitrary government could put any proposed law in force at once, but in the higher civilization representative government continues to grow, and while the methods of sumaking are slow, in the long run the laws are better for the whole people."

YMAN J. GAGE OPPOSES ALDRICH FINANCIAL BILL.

former Secretary of the Treasury Says Measure Discriminates Against Small Banks.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL New York, Aug. 30.-Lyman J. Gage, former Secretary of the Treasury, does not think the Aldrich bill a good measure as a whole, but has nothing but praise for the Fowler bill as a relief in a financial emergency. According to an interview published in the Newark Sunday News to-day, Mr. Gage talked freely on the general situ ation. In answer to the first question Mr. Gage replied:

erwards, I expressed my views, but there there is an elastic currency or any other

"What would have been the result had the Aldrich bill been made a law last winter Mr Gage" bad one. I do not know whether they are to take it up again in the next session Congress or not. Its most objectionable feature is the proposition to require nation al banks to pay depositors 2 per cent interest on all deposits. This would be a mos unjust discrimination against the country banks in favor of the big city benks."

"Have you any idea that the Rockefeller interests saw an advance draft of this bill because of their close relations to Benator Aldrich?"

interests saw an advance draft of this bill because of their close relations to Senator Aldrich?"

"No, I think not. But it is quite likely the Morgan interests were advised with. There is no objection to the proposition m the Aldrich bill for depositing the customs receipts in the Lational banks instead of keeping them locked up in Treasury vaults so much dead capital. These receipts amount to about $20,000,000 a year, or more than $700,000 a day. The internal revenue receipts are subject to deposit in the depositories and there is no reason why the customs receipts should not be.

"The Idea in that measure, however, which proposes that the Government make loans against first-mortgage bonds that have paid dividends uninterruptedly for a long period of years, means little or nothing, because there are comparatively few of such bonds now.

"What few exist are held by private ownership and are scattered in such shape that they are not and could not be placed in the possession of the bank for securing loans upon to any extent worth mentioning.

"Nearly all the railways have consolidated, new securities have been issued and the bringing of the different divisions of the railways together has changed the conditions. Technically speaking, a first-mortgage bond on these consolidated roads is not a first-mortgage bond on the whole line, and the strength of the new securities theoretically are not as great as the original ones, though practically they may be worth just as much."

"How do you view the provisions proposed in the Fowler bill for financial elasticity?"

"It is a wise and admirable bill as a whole. It aims to give relief in any financial elasticity."

"It is a wise and admirable bill as a whole. It aims to give relief in any financial contingency that may arise. It may be in some of its features somewhat too sweepirg; it may go too far." FACTORY FOR POPLAR BLUFF.
